

Frank Lee, coordinator of Asian Americans Against Abortion, believes that abortion hurts women and families. He has been active in the Bay Area, working with various organizations and legislators on political issues or lawmaking for over 20 years, especially on injustice, discrimination, governmental inefficiency, morality, and family values, for the betterment of our society. He is a leader, board member, or advisor, of different organizations and has two master degrees including one in public administration.

He spearheaded the media campaign of California Proposition 4 in the Bay Area during the November Election of 2008. This proposition, if passed, would have required minor girls to notify a parent before abortion. This is already a law in most of the states.

According to Frank, we have allowed abortion to decimate our future for too long by killing children before they are born. He maintains that Americans, regardless of background, should stand up and ensure that every life is being cherished.
